descrizione dell'attività
2020 - 2021 University of Padova, Italy Postdoctoral Research Scholar  Charged to design an action-research project within the FAMI funding scheme, in collaboration with the Municipality of Padova. The goal is to find innovative strategies and models to foster migrants' integration into the city and to increase their autonomy from social services. The project is carried out by means of semi-structured interviews and a survey, the former aimed at identifying expectations and design pathways on how to make migrants and locals build common ground, the latter at highlighting the main learning needs of social services' operators in order to design a consistent training programme.
2019 Quasar Institute for Advanced Design, Italy Adjunct professor

Charged of the design and leading a teaching program focusing on participatory methodologies applied to human-computer interaction and service design. The course was structured in three modules: a theoretical and an experiential ones plus analyses of practical experiences through meetings with experts.

2018-2019 CNR, Italy

Research Fellow

Main investigator of a participatory research aimed to counter young generations' abuse of alcohol and drugs as well as conflicts with residents through the analysis of their representations of night life. The project was carried out by means of ethnography and on-site interviews analysed through discourse analysis.

2016-2017 La Sapienza University of Rome, Italy

Postdoctoral Research Scholar

Designed research projects linking social-psychological findings about participatory methods to User Experience and Service Design. This goal was carried out by researching and analysing the field literature as well as drafting scientific papers and EU funded research projects (Erasmus+ and Horizon). I also led seminars and classes addressed to graduate students.

2015-2016 Joint Research Center, Bruxelles European Commission, Belgium

Research Fellow

Joined the foresight and behavioural insights unit of the JRC to work on a research project aimed at building a vision on the future of the sharing economy in Europe, feeding into the political agenda of the Commission. Charged of extensive literature review, stakeholders management and participatory research methods I conducted to interviews, designed and led workshops,

2013-2014 Claremont Graduate University, USA

Visiting Research Scholar

Main investigator of a research project aimed to compare the determinants of citizens' political participation between California and Italy,. The goal was to add to the political and sociological literature on the topic with findings from social psychology in order to build strategies to foster citizens' political participation into public policymaking. The research period resulted in 3 published papers and a still ongoing collaboration between the involved Italian and Californian Universities.

2010-2011 La Sapienza University of Rome, Italy

Research Assistant

Main investigator of a research project aimed at building a cultural psychological model of public participation in policymaking. To this end I carried out an action-research in the municipality of Arezzo (IT), an extensive literature review and came out with a theoretical model that opened a new field for the discipline. The research activities resulted in a published paper and led me to develop my phd project.
