TRAINING OR RESEARCH ACTIVITY

My research interests include applied microeconomics, economic policy issues, migration economics and labor economics. I am also familiar with working with administrative data. Specifically, in my PhD dissertation, supervised by Prof. Michele Raitano and Prof. Giovanni Peri, I investigate the effects of EU enlargement to the East-European countries on Italian women’s labor market participation. I focus on the role of immigrant labor force providing domestic services. Moreover, I analyze the extensive margin, i.e., the decisions to become employed or to retire, as well as the intensive margin.
