OTHER INFORMATION

The majority of my research focuses on issues of journalism, both in Pakistan and at the international level. Most of my research has focused on the construction of narratives and discourses by press on political and social issues, including populism, the Othering discourse, disinformation/misinformation in news, and other socio-political issues in Pakistan.

I have extensive experience, both during my doctorate and subsequent research publications, in quantitative and qualitative research methods and analysis, including but not limited to survey research, content analysis, discourse analyses, and statistics.
